

Proposed Constitutional Amendments

Button link to PDF

The following are drafts of proposed Amendments to the US Constitution. As with the Demand Legislation the new Congress will be expected to finalize the drafts and pas them thru both the House and Senate and send them to the 50 states for ratification so that they will become new Amendments to the US Constitution. Ratification requires a proposed Amendment to be passed by the legislature of at least 34 states. This should not be a problem once the voters make it clear to state legislators that their precious are on the line! Any questions??

These drafts will be refined as practical up until the Election so that the American Electorate – the Voters will be clear as to what they are voting for.

Again, an Amendment number has been attached for ease of reference. To date and since 1789, 27 Amendments have been made/attached to the Constitution. The initial ten (10) amendments became known as the US Bill of Rights.

The first proposed amendments presented will be Administrative in purpose e.g., the President's term of Office; while others will address specific public issues e.g., Gun Rights and Abortion Issues.
